Future planning for 2026	Across this year, we have continued to make positive progress toward our SSP goals, with a strong focus on improving student learning outcomes in literacy and numeracy and strengthening our wellbeing and inclusion practices. Our work has supported measurable improvements in classroom practice and increased clarity in how we respond to student needs. A key highlight has been the strengthening of our phonics approach. In 2026 we are looking at a re-design of our weekly literacy planning structures, as we will extend daily explicit phonics instruction from 30 minutes to one hour. This will ensure more time for decoding, phoneme/grapheme mapping and structured guided practice. We are hoping to increase our phonics resources which will contribute to stronger reading outcomes in the prep to year 2 cohort. Early data and classroom monitoring are showing improved confidence and accuracy in teaching phonics and reading among students in the lower year levels, with literacy support sessions now more closely targeted to identified needs. The work to create a greater sense of alignment in 3 to 6 is required to create consistency in our planning and instruction. With the release of the Victorian Lesson Plans we will be able to build our competency to use these resources across all year levels. We have also strengthened our use of the VTLM 2.0 to inform professional learning, build shared expectations of effective practice, and create clearer links between how students learn to how teachers plan. It would be essential to delve into mastery and what that looks like for everyone. The VTLM 2.0 and the resources are exceptional so we will continue the focus on the model. Continuing to build the teachers knowledge of the Victorian Curriculum 2.0 and further deepen their instructional knowledge, particularly in early literacy and structured teaching approaches, will begin to reduce variability across classrooms. Our Wellbeing and Inclusion work has continued to progress. We have made notable traction with Disability Inclusion and the language of adjustments and created rich resources to support staff, however we need to deepen the use of these resources and how our classroom practices align and include ES staff building their competency to actively support students. However, we are thrilled with the development of more consistent processes for Disability Inclusion funding through; documenting, communicating, and reviewing adjustments. This also supports the teacher knowledge to build as well as have students remain engaged in their learning. Continued focus is needed to embed these systems and ensure consistency school-wide. We have also seen improvements in student wellbeing outcomes through our tiered intervention approach, which is helping teachers identify emerging needs earlier and access support more efficiently. Students are more able to engage in learning with the right adjustments and wellbeing strategies in place. The streamlining of our processes, role clarity and organisational design has worked well. Next year, we will continue to prioritise the SSP goals and KIS that will drive the strongest gains:- Consolidate and monitor the expanded phonics block to maximise reading growth in Foundation–Year 2- Redesign the Literacy Block to include Literacy Skills and Text Study aligned with the VLPs - Continue embedding the VTLM 2.0 as the foundation for teaching and learning- Strengthen whole-school Inclusion and explore the PCMs for planning, IEPs and implementation of adjustments- Maintain and refine our tiered wellbeing responses to ensure early, proactive interventionOur implementation efforts will centre on:• ongoing coaching and modelling in literacy instruction• systematic tracking of phonics progress and reading interventions• consistent documentation processes for student adjustments and supports• strengthened PLC structures and collaborative planning cycles• aligned support systems for new and early-career teachersLooking ahead, we are conscious of the significant number of graduate teachers joining our school and the need for robust mentoring, coaching and structured support. Strengthening induction, developing capability in core instructional practices, and building confidence in inclusion and behaviour support will be essential to sustain improvement. We plan to provide targeted mentoring and professional support for our increased number of graduate teachers to build confidence and capability in high-impact instruction. We are super excited about 2026!
